

SKILLS INVENTORY

NAME: _____

DATE: _____

Skills can be developed and applied to all aspects of our lives including education, internships, volunteering, jobs, careers, and leisure activities. When exploring skills, it is important to identify which skills you like to use most often. In addition, it is important to identify skills you would like to develop to help you achieve your career goals.

Types of Skills:

- Transferable – Based on natural talents and abilities; transferable to different career fields and work functions
- Knowledge-Based – Developed through education, training, and hands-on experience
- Personal Attributes – Characteristics developed throughout one’s lifetime

In this Skills Inventory activity you will be selecting skills based on your level of competence and interest in ten skill theme areas (e.g. critical thinking, leadership) as well as individual skills (e.g. strategic planning, decision-making) which fall under each theme.

Get Started:

First review each skills theme category and rate which skills you would like to use most often based on your level of competency and interest (4 most competent/interested to 1 least competent/interested).

Then go back through and rate the sub-competencies (or individual skills) in the same way. Follow the prompting questions after rating to narrow down your top selections and plan next steps to develop or enhance your preferred skills.

You will then review this list again, but this time focused on the skills that you use/like least or feel you need to further develop through your education, internships, jobs, or other activities.
